The G2 Gallery Presents *Where the Wild Things Grow
Group Photo Exhibition
March 23–May 2, 2010

Venice, CA—On March 23, 2010, The G2 Gallery will present Where the Wild Things Grow, a group photo exhibition featuring artistic visions of flowers, trees, and wetlands by photographers Rob Badger, Edis Jurcys, Randy Redekopp, and Nita Winter.

Each photographer in The G2 Gallery’s springtime exhibition brings a unique perspective on some of the most beautiful facets of nature in bloom. Where the Wild Things Grow is set to coincide with the popular Theodore Payne Native Plant Garden Tour (April 10–11) and Venice Home & Garden Tour (May 1).

An Artist’s Reception for Where the Wild Things Grow will be held on Saturday, March 27. Please RSVP to events@theg2gallery.com.

About Rob Badger

For 40 years Rob Badger has created images of the natural world for a wide variety of clients, collectors, and art buyers. Using both aerial and ground perspectives, Rob’s powerful color imagery focuses on conservation, population, and environmental issues. He has won international awards for his Antarctica series, and “Best in Journalism” for his evocative environmental photography. In 1998, Rob was chosen by the Sierra Club to deliver a lecture at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C. to support their efforts in promoting federal mining law reform. Rob’s nature and environmental images have appeared in calendars, books, newspapers, and national and international magazines, including The New York Times, Washington Post, TIME, and others. Rob currently lives in Sausalito, California with photographer Nita Winter.

About Edis Jurcys

Based in Portland, Oregon, Edis Jurcys works as a freelance photographer and videographer primarily on editorial assignments, design projects and documentaries. A native of Lithuania, Edis gained his experience in film and photography in Russia, where he worked for Moscow Newspapers as a photojournalist. His work has been exhibited

About Randy Redekopp

Photographer Randy Redekopp specializes in large scale images of natural wonders. Randy's lush panoramas of verdant foliage are comprised of multiple images stitched together in Photoshop. A single image may be comprised of up to 29 pictures, thereby reproducing the natural world on a grand scale in an extremely high resolution. Randy's long term goal is to inspire conservation through his photography. He recently photographed the rainforest property of the non-profit Institute for Community Leadership in Washington to help raise awareness of how delicate rainforest ecosystems are. Randy hails from Montana and is currently based in Hollywood, California.

About Nita Winter

Nita Winter, a Sausalito based award-winning photographer, moved to San Francisco in 1976 where she began her photography career. She documented her work fighting wildfires in northern California, later focusing on her passion: capturing the rich and diverse culture of the Bay Area. Nita's first major project was "Children of the Tenderloin," a series illustrating the need for a school in a rough San Francisco neighborhood. Her clients include non-profits agencies, national and international corporations and publications: The New York Times, Sesame Street, and Parenting magazines. Seven years ago she began collaborating with her partner, nature photographer Rob Badger, to create an exquisite series documenting our vanishing wildflowers. They are currently working on their first joint book Impressions of Spring, Wildflowers of the West on our Public Lands.

About The G2 Gallery

Established in March 2008, The G2 Gallery in Venice, California, is a green art space with a dedicated focus on contemporary nature and wildlife photography. In keeping with G2's commitment to supporting arts and the environment, the gallery presents exhibitions with eco-conscious themes, donating the proceeds from all art sales to environmental charities and hosts free concerts and lectures that bring awareness of critical issues to our community.
